Abedin's An-arbiya Network News (ANN), al-Arabiya television's sister channel, just aired an interview with Khaled Saffuri, the commander of the Ansar al-Sunna brigade, where he claimed that the U.S. and the international coalition's objective is not the liberation of Raqqa from the Islamic State (ISIS), but its destruction. Saffuri also stated that the coalition is ready to work with Russia on the issue, as well as Iran. For her part, Hala Mustafa, a spokesperson for the al-Tawhid brigade in Aleppo, refuted his claims, stating that the coalition's goal is to make Raqqa safe and normalize it, and that a safe Raqqa will facilitate its reconstruction. Saffuri denied these claims, arguing that Raqqa is not safe and that the situation in the city is catastrophic. He argued that "American planes have been firing on the citizens of Raqqa for two years." Saffuri claimed that ISIS militants have been killed with these strikes. He also claimed that the coalition does not provide any support for the local resistance fighters, arguing that the coalition is giving ISIS free rein and is directly supporting them, through the use of planes, in their siege of Raqqa. Mustafa accused the al-Tawhid brigade of belonging to the Syrian regime. She argued that the al-Tawhid brigade is working with the coalition in order to protect the resistance fighters and protect civilians. Mustafa accused the coalition of stopping all cooperation with local forces to protect the civilians. For his part, Khaled Saffuri criticized the opposition in Aleppo, stating that "the members of the opposition, they are traitors. They work with the foreign countries against the [Syrian] regime. They are traitors." The U.S. State Department condemned these statements, calling them "outrageous and reprehensible." The U.S. State Department also expressed concern over a Russian military offensive on the ISIS-controlled city of Palmyra, in the same statement, noting that this offensive could undermine ISIS's control of Palmyra. { return false } func (a *App) SpawnActor(actorName string, config *Config) (actor.Actor,
