Q: difference between a method and a function
A: These two words are used interchangeably and that is a big problem. Function = A named group of statements that do something. Method = A named group of statements that do something with arguments passed to it. All the methods in the System.DateTime class that are static, are anonymous functions. You will see the parameterless, named function everywhere you look - DateTime.Now and most of the instances of DateTime, etc. I can count three main categories of functions: The first category consists of all the static, parameterless functions and properties of the classes in the .Net Framework. The second category consists of functions that return a value. For example, List.Sort() or Math.Max(). The third category consists of methods. The methods are similar to functions, but they do not return a value. For example, string.Concat() or DateTime.Now().
Q: WSO2 ESB 5.0.0 - Message Trace I would like to have a non-sensitive trace for each message in a Message Exchange Pattern. Is there a way to do this in WSO2 ESB 5.0.0? The wso2esb-j2ee-integrator-plugin was deprecated in WSO2 ESB 5.0.0 If you are using that plugin, I suggest you should use the "message-transformer" feature of WSO2 ESB 5.0.0. select particular region in selenium webdriver using Java I have to go to a particular section
