The program is run at the command line and it shows the results in HTML format. Firefox 3 History Recovery is a free utility that allows to recover most of the Firefox history information from your registry, cache and Firefox cookies. This is an unofficial Firefox tool and there is no tool that is 100% trusted by the developers of Firefox. The tool is created to generate 100% of the registry and Cookie information. Below is the technology of the tool: There are four different SQLite databases used in this tool to store information. They are History.DB, Cookies.DB, Cache.DB and Strings.DB. • History.DB. Where the history records are stored. • Cookies.DB. Where the cookies are stored. • Cache.DB. Stores the cache data. • Strings.DB stores the aliases in the browser. The main part of the tool is the main SQLite viewer. This is used to view the information from the databases in read only mode. Once you copy and paste a result to the result viewer you can recover the information. Here is a list of the features of the tool: • Several on-the-fly recovery options • Copy recovered data to clipboard and paste • Recover the history, cache, cookies and strings information from any Firefox version • Allow to copy one record or more than one (multiple records are joined with commas) • Allow to search the recovered content on different fields in the recovered records • Possible to recover the history up to 2.0 GB (tested with 0.5 GB) • Browser and version specific • Automatic recovery of the information from Firefox 3 and earlier versions • Can handle big databases up to 2 GB • Memory Allocation errors will be displayed. • Encryption of the information is handled. • The tool can create HTML, CSV, TXT and XML file • On Windows you need to enable the Read Flags on this file to make sure that the file can be opened in the text editor. • There is a version of the program that is just for Linux users Firefox history recovery is a freeware, it doesn't have any serial number protection. Once you download and run it, you will see a window like this: When you launch it, it will download data from Cache.DB and Cache.JS. Then it will parse the data from Cache.DB and Cache.JS. There are different decoding options:
