FIFA fans will get a first look at a lot of cool new features with FIFA 22, including using motion capture to simulate key player movements in Real Player Motion (RPM) and, for the first time, the ability to play matches from another time zone.

Moving the game back to the past has been a player request for a long time, and it looks like FIFA 22 delivers on that. We'll also get to see the new Flowmotion simulation technology.

Flowmotion was originally introduced in FIFA 15, but the full potential of how it can be used has yet to be fully realized. We've got a series of videos from EA Sports to explain exactly what Flowmotion can do, and how it can transform the simulation of player movement. You'll also see some footage of the simulator in action in our latest video. Project Spotlight: FIFA 22 - FIFA 23 It's no secret that our biggest year for delivering new gameplay content on FIFA is between FIFA 20 and FIFA 21. We did even that in one year -- going from FIFA 19 to FIFA 20 and then back to FIFA 19.

For FIFA 22, we are going to do a little more of that. To build out these new features, we need to build our game and release it in a relatively short period of time -- so I'm going to be pulling FIFA 22 gameplay out from our main game and releasing it in stages. There will be gameplay footage throughout the whole year. The first installment will be on September 27, 2019, giving us all a lot of new gameplay in September. How to Play: We'll be putting together the first gameplay video this week, in addition to providing a lot more written content about all the new features in FIFA 22.

Getting all of the media together will require a lot of teamwork to make it happen. Fortunately, EA Sports has a team that does a great job on this. My team, Gameplay and Technology, is putting together all the video content and I'm coordinating with the other video producers -- Patrick O'Rourke, Andrew Aitchison, Steven Goodwin, Jake Andelson, Alex Seropian, Richard Newby, and Brandon Reinhart. We're all pulling off the big feat together! You can expect new gameplay videos and written content in the coming weeks about the feature that we're working on. Some of them will cover other key features, while others will cover something totally new. Some of them game's best. LEVERS The laser-accuracy of the ball has been improved. It is now easier to deflect and make long, powerful passes when accurate strikes are required, and more of the ball is taken up by the pitch to add speed and power when long passes need to be fired. Players will now automatically drift to the weak side to receive a pass, which prevents the player from breaking their preferred angle for passes. Levering forward now also makes an impact and increases accuracy. POWER TUNING All of the player models have been tuned to deliver a more lifelike performance. Players
