Obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) is associated with lower respiratory tract infections and outcomes. We examined the relationship between OSA severity and risk of all-cause and OSA-related inpatient hospitalizations in adults with OSA. We performed a retrospective cohort study of adults with OSA using the Medical Expenditure Panel Survey (2009-2010). OSA was defined by reported snoring and daytime sleepiness (Bergen 4-Item Epworth Sleepiness Scale score ≥ 10), and severe OSA was based on the apnea hypopnea index (AHI). Multivariable logistic regression models were used to estimate the odds of inpatient hospitalization for infection, pneumonia, and influenza among those with and without OSA, based on AHI quartiles. We also examined the risk of short-term outcomes, which included hospitalization for lower respiratory tract infections and a composite of all-
